

Yue Xin's Vacuous Volume

- Charity begins at home, and vengeance begins next door.
- Even the mightiest whale is helpless in a desert.
- You can ignore the fox, but the fox may not ignore you.
- A single ant may be the end of a human dam, but a beaver's dams are crawling with insects.
- To be happy is to know joy. To be wise is to know happiness.
- Grass fears the frost, but frost fears the moon.
- A firework in the hand is worth two in the bush.
- Dream of a marriage and you wake to a funeral.
- When all you have are cats, then you must plow the field.
- Learning is weightless, but treasure you can easily carry.
- A bad craftsman steals the tools of the craftsman next door.
- When you bow low, do not break your nose.
- Behind an incapable man are always more incapable men.
- A bird sings because it cannot speak.
- If you can't scale the mountain, you will never climb down the mountain.
- With money, one may command devils. Without it, one cannot even summon a man.
- Despise ignorance and make everyone pay for your learning.
- The pen is mightier than the sword when the ink is poison.
- Medicine cannot cure an incurable disease.